Ford's assault suspect linked to Danville

By BILL KETSDEVER

Editor's note: Bill Ketsdever, editor of Danville's Valley Pioneer, was acquainted with the woman who allegedly shot at President Ford on Monday. Working with reporters from the Washington Post and other national publications, he put together this remarkable profile. (Special to The Times)

Sara Jane Moore, who is accused of trying to shoot President Ford in San Francisco Monday, began to emerge as a bizarre individual Tuesday, as the Pioneer, members of the national press and Time magazine began putting the pieces together.

This writer knew her from September 1972 to September 1973 when she was the head bookkeeper at Round Hill Country Club in Alamo.

Even then, she went by three names. She gave two of them when she was arrested Monday: Sara Jane Aalberg and Sara Jane Moore.

It has been said by former Round Hill employes that she listed as many as 16 in her personnel file.

It is known her maiden name was Sara Jane Kahn, and that she lived in Charlotte, West Virginia in her childhood. Moore was her mother's maiden name, one Sara Jane was to take later as her "professional" name.

Fifteen or 20 years ago she was married to Lt. Col. Sydney Manning, U.S Army, and she bore him three children, all of whom are living with her parents in West Virginia. One report said Manning deserted her, another said he died while the couple was still married.

Sara's next spouse was a man named Aalberg, with whom she had one child — J. Frederik Wilhelm Aalberg — at least that was the name she gave on the membership form when she moved into Sycamore.

In 1967, she and her then husband, Dr. Willard Carmel, a physician at Kaiser Hospital in Walnut Creek, purchased a home in Sycamore at 592 Old Orchard Way, and in 1972 she went to work for Round Hill.

One woman who worked with her there, and left because of her, described Mrs. Carmel, alias Moore, as "not a rational human being."

The former employe said Sara Jane was not in her new office surroundings five minutes before she started physically moving desks around, claiming their placement wasn't efficient.

Another long-time employe, who left because of the suspect, said she cried every day she was there, due to the treatment she received.

Sara Jane Moore

It was learned last Tuesday that in addition to a post office box in Walnut Creek, Ms Moore still has a box in the Danville Post Office, where she receives mail under both Moore and Aalberg, and that mail was delivered there as recently as yesterday morning.

A local contractor told us yesterday of his first encounter with Ms. Moore while she was at Round Hill. His crew was completing an emergency job which went past the dinner hour and his wife decided to take up food to the men.

Once on the site, she handed out the food and decided to sit with them and have a bite.

"Mrs. Moore came out and told us we couldn't eat on the ground," the builder told the Village Pioneer, "even though we were working through to help get the job done."

Several years later the woman asked the same contractor to make some minor repairs on her own home before she offered it for sale.

"I quoted her something less than $500," he said, "and she agreed. We did the repairs, and made four or five extra trips to see that she was satisfied."

Apparently Ms. Moore by this time had been divorced by Dr. Carmel and was obviously distraught. The contractor told us the next thing he knew, the house was sold, the former owner was gone and he was out $283.

"I only charged her about half of what I quoted her," he told me Tuesday, "and it wasn't so much the money, but I was determined to find her."

Through the real estate firm, the builder found Ms. Moore was working in Benicia for a manufacturing firm. He called the office and a friendly receptionist told him Ms Moore did work there and quickly connected him.

His former client apologized and promised to send a check in the next mail but two weeks later he hadn't received any payment. A second call to Benicia resulted in a less than friendly receptionist, albeit the same one he talked to before, who told him in less than warm tones than Ms Moore was no longer an employe and her firm neither knew where she worked nor cared.

"It was my impression," the builder said, "that she was a person dying for attention from anyone. She wanted to be a big shot and no one would give her a job where she was a big shot.

"When I saw what she had done, on TV, I thought: She's finally having her day...She's probably fulfilled her need for attention."

But chamber 'endorses concept'

Redevelopment nixed

PLEASANTON — The city's proposed redevelopment plan suffered a severe reversal yesterday as the Chamber of Commerce failed to endorse the $27 million project as presently outlined.

A motion to endorsê "the concept of a redevelopment plan for the City of Pleasanton" was passed by a 21 to 12 vote of Chamber members. A similar motion supporting the redevelopment proposal offered by the city was rejected by more than a three to two margin.

The Chamber had previously given blanket support tk the redevelopment plan, but pressure from Citizens Against Redevelopment (CARD) Chairman Bernie Gerton forced the Chamber to reconsider. Gerton, former mayor and present Chamber member, charges the plan is actqally a disguised capital improvements program and is jot acceptable in its present form.

Gerton's motion that the Chamber ask its members to again vote on endorsing the city's plan at its Oct. 14 meeting was passed, 21 to 12. His measure asks the Chamber consider specific points in the plan that are controversial or in question.

"CARD is realistic enough to accept that the Chamber is more or less duty-bound to endorse a redevelopment plan of some sort because redevelopment and revitalizatikn of the downtown has long been a project cherished by the Chamber and worked on faithfully and diligently by many of its members," Gerton wrote to Fernandez in requasting the vote delay.

He suggested several considerations be given to the present plan, including eliminating the following areas from the project area:

Any area included for the sole purpose of obtaijing the tax increment revenues, except for the proposed Stoneridge Shopping Center;

Any residential area not contained in the central business district (CBD), such as Harris Acres or Stoneridge Drive;

Any residential area within the CBD not needing redevelopment and slated to remain residential, such as Walnut Drive;

The sewer plant, because it cannot wait for redevelopment funds and the cost should be spread over the entire city;

The sports park, since it has nothing to do with revitalization of the CBD and would be subject to pklitical pressures;

The Las Positas overpass — construction is possible right now if Pleasanton would follow Santa Clara's example and loan the State Highway Dept. money, which they would later pay back.

Gerton further asks that the redevelopment agency pass resolutions to restrict its powers, such as tha right to force homeowners to sign participation agreements.

The letter concludes requesting each homeowner in the project area be notified if his property is subject to redevelopment and to what extent, and if and when the property would be acquired by the city.

"CARD feels that if the proposed district and the agency were modified according to the above mentioned points, then the revitalization of the downtown would have a good chance of being realized and the fears of the propoerty owners and citizens would be minimized."

Gerton stated the Chamber was a special interest group and pleaded with members to put the decision over to Oct. 14. "This particular plan would contribute to your own demise," he said.

George Spiliotopoulis, owner of the Cheese Factory on Main St., also spoke in favor of delaying a final endorsement vote.

"I don't think anybody in this room is 100 per cent sure either way," he said. The final cost would be $67 million for redevelopment under the city's plan, he added, but didn't detail where he felt the extra $40 million would go.

Chamber President Fernandez quickly convened a meeting of the board of directors after the Chamber voting was over to choose a committee to review the city plan. He said it would make suggestions and revisions to the present plan, thereby making it acceptable to Chamber members.

Fernandez didn't say how he would get the city council to implement all the changes his committee would present, although Councilman Bob Philcox, present at the meeting, said the council was ready to listen to all ideas regarding the plan.

Named to the seven-man committee were Warren Harding, George Spiliotopoulis, Ted Mann, Fernandez, and Ken Mercer, with two spots unannounced as of late yesterday.

"I am really disappointed that we (the Chamber) didn't arrive at a decision and just get it out of the way," Fernandez lamented after the meeting. But he was optimistic a redevelopment plan would eventually pass.

"I think to a man we all want something to happen concerning revitalization. I'm sure revisions will be offered to the present plan that will make it acceptable to all."

Where is 580 link?

Street agreement ignored

A 1972 agreement binding the City of Pleasanton and the valley's four major gravel extractors to "proceed immediately" on development of a new road linking Stanley Boulevard to Interstate 580 is not being lived up to by any of those parties.

The agreement was the cornerstone of a compromise whereby gravel trucks were to be allowed use of First Street and Sunol Boulevard in gaining access to I-680. The city had already denied much of the gravel truck flow onto Santa Rita Road, and was threatening to also close First Street to those 80,000-pound loads.

The producers responded with a "nonrefundable cash donation" of $30,000, plus making road-base material available to the city at wholesale prices.

But the key plank in that contract is item 7. "Producers agree, in cooperation with City and County, to proceed immediately to encourage construction within five years of a public road between Interstate Highway 580 and Stanley Boulevard," the paragraph states.

But today, three years after that agreement was signed, there is no evidence of any action to gain that public road. And an interchange built with federal funds for the express purpose of linking that public road to I-580 has been reserved for the last three years to the exclusive use of just two quarry operators (Kaiser and Rhodes-Jamieson) and their customers.

The Times approached Supervisor John D. Murphy with the evidence indicating a firm county pledge to "to provide public access" to that El Charro Road interchange.

"We simply don't have the money," Murphy said of the county's failure to abide by that pledge. "Conditions have changed since 1969," the supervisor said of that commitment. (Murphy did promise however to trace the agreement through all responsible county departments "and see just where we stand, and why.")

The Times has also learned that Pleasanton's entire street maintenance program has been jeopardized, and hundreds of thousands of dollars in city funds diverted, because of the abuse placed on public streets by those trucks.

The evidence would seem to indicate valid grounds for the city to terminate "upon 90 days written notice" all access to local streets by the gravel interests.

That information will be carried in tomorrow's Times.

Extension commitment

COVA may review El Charro

PLEASANTON — The Congress of Valley Agencies may form a review committee of citizens and private specialists to determine what commitment the county made to extending El Charro Road, Mayor Pro Tem Bill Herlihy said Monday night.

He said the committee would review the actions of the county, state and federal government.

El Charro, which connects to I-580 at a federally financed interchange, has caused concern in the valley since it was revealed by The Times that the county has no plans to build a public road linking El Charro and Stanley Boulevard.

The interchange is used almost solely by two gravel firms and their clients, while other firms are forced to route their gravel trucks through Pleasanton streets — to the concern of the city.

Alameda County reportedly agreed six years ago to act immediately to provide "public access" to El Charro Road, but no plans have been drawn up since 1969.

Herlihy said he would like to see citizens who are engineers and accountants "review all the records available."

He said he hoped COVA could announce the committee at its Oct. 9 meeting, and appoint members the following month.

Site hazardous

Montessori school nixed

PLEASANTON — A Montessori school for as many as 20 youngsters from three to six years old was ruled out by the city council Monday night because members felt the proposed site at 417 Sycamore Rd. was hazardous.

Paul and Elizabeth Marshall had sought a reversal of a planning commission decision that denied them permission to conduct the school in their home, located on 1.4 acres.

The council was concerned about increased use of a septic tank on the property and potential traffic problems at the intersection of Sunol Boulevard and Sycamore.

The intersection has been the scene of several near misses among cars and gravel trucks in the past, according to a staff report that recommended denial of the appeal.

Several neighbors in the Happy Valley area spoke for or against the school, which the Marshalls say would have offered "a comfortable, homelike environment."

"All of us felt the school itself was worthwhile," said Mayor Pro Tem Bill Herlihy. "I think most parents would like to expose their children to that school."

If the school were approved, the staff suggested a left-turn lane be put on Sunol, parents be encouraged to use car pools and avoid left turns from Sunol onto Sycamore, and that street improvpments be financed by property owners.

The council also, by a 3-1 vote, approved plans for a traffic signal at Hopyard Road and Johnson Industrial Drive. The signal is expected to be completed next February.

Councilwoman Joyce LeClaire voted against it because she said she did not believe it would alleviate problems at the intersection.

Council members supported a request from the Housing Authority that asked the Alameda County Housing Authority to run 30 units of low-income housing in Pleasanton under new federal regulations.

"Our only concern is that the subsidy by the federal government for low-income rent is too low to come up to the rent structure in Pleasanton," said Herlihy.

Council turns thumbs down on discount station

PLEASANTON — The city council Monday night denied, 4-0, an appeal by Carl Graffenstatte Jr. to expand his newly purchased gas station at the corner of St. Mary's and Main streets.

In upholding the planning commission's Aug. 27 decision, the council turned down revised plans for the discount station worked out between city staff and Graffenstatte.

The staff, in recommending approval of the new plans, said they could ease traffic problems at the corner and would be more aesthetically pleasing.

The council, however, objected to expanding the station because members would prefer to see it eventually phased out. It is permitted at the site because it had operated there under a previous owner before the area was rezoned.

But if the station were to be closed for more than 90 days, it could not reopen without a new permit.

"I'm surprised these plans got through the city system," said Mayor Pro Tem Bill Herlihy, who said he did not feel a business catering to cars meshed with plans to someday build a downtown mall for pedestrians.

He said the station could draw between 9,000 and 15,000 cars to its Main Street entrance each month, aggravating downtown traffic problems.

"When you get right down to it, what we're getting is an asphalt lot with six gas pumps on it and a sign out front that tells how much the gas is," Councilwoman Joyce LeClaire said of the new plans.

Councilman Bob Philcox said he believed the revisions could alleviate past traffic problems at the station, but would not solve them — and could instead perpetuate the station "for another 25 or 30 years."

"I'm willing to wait a few more years and phase it out," he said. "At some point it must become economically unfeasible" to run a small gas station.

By mistake, Graffenstatte had been issued a building permit by the city and had already begun the expansion of his station when he was told to halt the work and obtain another permit.

During a public hearing on the station, Bill Hirst, lawyer for a Graffenstatte competitor and former city attorney, argued the station site was too small and that expansion would escalate traffic problems.

The self-service station must be opened by Oct. 12, or Graffenstatte will lose his right to operate it.

Lab 'fingerprints' blood with x-rays

A method of analyzing blood without the use of sometimes dangerous radioactive materials has been developed jointly by researchers at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory and the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco.

The method — commonly known as "atomic fingerprinting" — is x-ray flouresccence excitation analysis, which relies on the fact that individual atoms react to x-rays in different manners.

The great advantage of atomic fingerprinting is that it is fast and not at all dangerous.

Each test takes only one to two minutes and results are ready in a matter of hours. The amount of blood required is very small and a large number of tests can be done in a single day.

The process involves giving the iodine, say, to determine how well the kidneys are functioning. If they are doing their job properly, iodine should pass out of the body rapidly.

In the past, the only way to trace how much iodine was involved was to use a radioactive isotope of iodine and then check out radioactivity levels.

With atomic fingerprinting, the sample of blood is excited by x-rays. Iodine absorbs x-rays and re-emits them at a slightly different frequency. The analyzer is set up to detect iodine x-ray emissions and thus give a fast and accurate count of the amount of iodine in the sample.

The analyzer — developed by Dr. David Camp, Albert Voegele and Richard Friesen of the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory and Dr. Leon Kaufman of the U.C. Med Center — is now in routine use at the Med Center and the University of Utah Medical Center in Salt Lake City.

Because of the lack of radioactivity, small children and pregnant women can be checked with no danger.

"This creates new diagnostic capabilities for the physician" said Dr. Camp "Some of these tests, such as an iodine tracer for kidney function, used to take hours. A doctor might have had to wait for days for a large number of tests, making the tests impractical."

The development work took about one year and was sponsored by the National Institutes of Health and LLL. Two commercial concerns provided the instruments designed for the project.

City ponders ridge forclosure

PLEASANTON — The city is going to try to get back some of the money it has sunk into the Pleasanton Township County Water District — a project that so far has cost some $155,000.

That's the amount owed in deliquent payments since the city assumed responsibility for the assessment district, once part of an immense, proposed development known as the Santos Joint Ranch Venture.

The land — some 2,200 acres — was never developed. Great Western Ranches, which owned the property, went bankrupt several years ago and stopped making payments on the district.

That's when the city, underwritten by taxpayers, had to take over the payments.

Payments on road bonds have also become past due on the property.

But the persons who held those bonds have gradually taken over ownership of the land to settle the debts.

However, because of the way the parcels of land were divided, it was uncertain how much in back payments each of the new property owners owed the assessment district.

Before the city can foreclose to recover the money it is owed, it must mesh the schedules for road bond and assessment district payments to determine how much the new landowners owe.

Jim Walker, city finance director, said he is now doing just that, and has already sent out notices to some of the 34 persons who held the bonds and later became property owners.

Those who don't pay the money owed to the assessment district will lose their property to the city, which will try to rerell it.

However, Walker said, the city could wind up owning a patchwork of land parcels that it is unable to sell.

He said he "has a suspicion" the money owed on the land is "getting close" to what the land is actually worth.

Mori urges involvement

LIVERMORE — Merchants were warned to "get involved" in the new wave of laws governing business and consumer "if the free enterprise system as we know it" is to survive.

Speaking to one of the largest turnouts at a Livermore Chamber of Commerce luncheon meeting this year, Assemblyman S. Floyd Mori told his Tuesday audience that "involvement means awareness of what's happening around us" to include also concerns over "the environment, and crime in the streets."

The 15th Assembly District representative reported that "thousands of bills" now being submitted to the state legislature deal with "business and consumerism." He acknowledged that much of that legislation is instigated by or on behalf of the consumer. "You need to get involved" he warned his audience, if the commercial sector is to maintain its voice in government, and if free enterprise is to prevail.

Questioned as to the need for the "government's intrusion" in free entrprise, Mori answered: "If free enterprise means deception, then I don't want any part of that free enterprise."

He warned that "it's a whole new ball game" with consumers "much more aware of their rights." And he cited the recent skyrocketing of medical malpractice claims as evidence that "it is going to cost us a great deal more" for the privilege of doing business, and ultimately, for the price of that service or product.

On other points, Mori noted that "the inventory tax is unfair" and probably stands a good chance of repeal through the work of a committee on which he serves. He explained his support of legislation that would repeal the fair trade price limit on many products, adding that "pricing should be determined" by free and open competition.

He spoke in favor of the consumer's right to initiate laws governing business, but he noted that "business must also get involved" in that law-making process "if the free enterprise system on which this country was built is to prevail."

The program will be directed by experienced members of the club for both men and women in the community. Each session will cover a different aspect of speech preparation, speaking and listening, with the purpose of developing self-confidence, leadership and the ability to communicate effectively.

A fee of $15 per person will be charged for the eight sessions held at Northern California Savings and Loan Association from 7 to 8:30 a.m. Graduation certificates will be awarded at the end of the course.

For more information contact Jay Knauer at 846-8812, Charlie Schooler at 447-7730, or Dick Sattler at 828-4437. The Amador Valley Toastmasters Club is a member of Toastmasters International.

Wildflower, Mervyn's, Squire get it together

A dessert fashion show slated Saturday, Sept. 27 at St. Charles Church, 1315 Lomitas Ave., Livermore, will benefit the parish youth activities committee.

The show is the result of efforts by Youth Coordinators Emily and Rueben Pena, who devote much of their time to helping the youth of the parish.

Emily has secured a varied fashion show featuring styles from The Wildflower of Livermore, Mervyn's of Dublin, and The Squire of Livermore. Men, women and children of the parish will model the fashions.

Entertainment and door prizes are also promised for the donation of $2 per person, $1 for children under 16. Tickets are available at the door or by calling 443-4810, 455-1642 or 447-8036.

Memories of summer

Members of the Livermore-Amador Toastmistress Club will reminisce regarding their summer holidays tonight from 8 to 10 p.m. at Homestead Savings and Loan Association in Livermore.

Anxieties and anticipation, receptions and farewells, sightseeing, accommodations and the pleasure of new and old friends — these will be the subject of extemporaneous presentations for the evening.

The Toastmistress Club is dedicated to helping members feel confident and poised in familiar and unfamiliar situations alike. Toastmistress training provides training to valley women in expressing ideas interestingly, objectively and persuasively.

The public is invited to the meeting, and more information is available from Arlene Morgan at 455-0164.

America is what it eats

It's an All-American menu to be served at Livermore's Festival '75 planned Oct. 4 and 5 by the Livermore Cultural Arts Council. Those who come to enjoy the Bicentennial festival of the arts — continuous entertainment by local musicians, bands, dramatists, dancers, artists — may also rest their feet at an outdoor cafe outside the Carnegie Building and enjoy hot dogs, turkey sandwiches, jerky and stick candy. Maggie Smaltz is one of the Livermore Junior Women who will operate the cafe. Beta Sigma Phi members such as Juanita Sissung of Xi Phi Omega Chapter will offer ice cream cones and lemonade.

Plant Talk

If the pot pinches

By SUE JOHNSON

How do you tell if your plant has outgrown its pot?

Usually it shows signs of distress first. Are the top leaves growing but the bottom older leaves dropping at a rapid rate? Does your plant wilt, even after you have just watered it? Are the plant's roots pushing out the bottom of the pot, or have the roots made a solid mass across the soil surface. Does your plant look top-heavy in its pot?

Or has the soil itself sunk in the pot? After about a year I've been surprised to notice how some plants have sunk in their pots. That soil compacts slowly but surely.

If you're still not sure if it's repotting time, take a look at the root system. Courage! Rotate the pot slowly as you tap the sides against the edge of a table top or kitchen counter. Then, supporting the plant with one hand, upturn the pot and give it a sharp whack along its rim. Plant and soil should pop out intact.

If you see more roots than soil, it's time to repot. The best time to repot, if possible, is early spring since the plant has rested over the winter and has less tender new growth. But if your plant is going to suffer with the wait, repot now.

Fall is also an appropriate time for repotting, primarily for plants that have outgrown their containers during the summer. Some fast growers, particularly in juvenile form, benefit from repotting twice a year.

Maureen Ouellette assumes leadership for St. Ray's guild

Maureen Ouellette, attractive new president of St. Raymond's Women's Guild in Dublin, came to California when her husband, Walter, was transferred here by the Del Monte Company from their native Maine, 13 years ago.

Now an avowed Californian and mother of four native Californians, Maureen says it would be very hard to go back to the rural small-town life from which she came.

Her children, two boys and two girls, 6, 7, 8 and 10, have given her more than enough to occupy her time. Although all of her children go to All Saints School in Hayward, she and her husband have been very involved in the popular girls' and boys' soccer program in Dublin. Walter is coach of the championship Shamrock Team. The children also play softball.

The girls have kept their mother busy as a Brownie leader and she claims, "We're a camping family." In fact they were in Oroville on the day of that city's recent earthquake. She says that if it hadn't been for the children's insistent pleas for McDonald's hamburgers, they would have been in the midst of it.

Although she busies herself with hobbies of sewing and ceramics, St. Raymond's Church and its related activities have had top priority on most of her time. A coordinator for the CCD Program in her neighborhood she has been a member of the Guild for eight years. She served as the organization's treasurer last year.

President Maureen looks forward to a busy year and has already shown her admirable organizational abilities, staffing chairmen for a varied program which includes a home-sevn fashion show, a day at the races, publication of a guild cookbook, and a parish fiesta.

NEW PRESIDENT FOR ST. RAY'S GUILD
Maureen Ouellette anticipates a busy year for the guild.

WHIPLASH!
THESE PEOPLE GET WELL

DIZZINESS-HEADACHES
A sixty-six year-old retired accountant came to our offices complaining of dizzy spells and headaches. He had fallen 2 years prior and ever since the spells became progressively worse. Our examination revealed nerve pressure in his neck. Spinal manipulation to realign his neck was administered, and at last report the condition had ceased to exist.

BACKACHE
This case report states that a 36-year-old lady, after having severe backaches, pains in both legs, constipation, and loss of sleep for 4 years, came to our office in extreme depression. Our examination and analysis revealed spinal distortion and pinched nerves as the cause of her problems. When our recommended period of correction had ended, our comparative examination showed that she had no backaches or leg pains, constipation had been eliminated and she was now sleeping all night.

WHIPLASH INJURY
A 20-year-old college student, rear-ended in an automobile accident complained of severe headaches and pains in his neck. He experienced ringing in his ears, blurred vision, and nervious tension. The injury had misplaced vertebrae, creating pressure on spinal nerves. The proper spinal analysis and corrections were made, and gradually all of his symptoms faded away. If you have a problem, and have not found lasting relief, perhaps we can be of service to you. Call us for an appointment. 447-8800. 2602 First St., Livermore.

I got friends (pow) friends (oomph)

Mike Zampa

Jim Lohmann and Jim Whitehead couldn't get together in Texas last August when young Lohmann was about to be married. So they've decided to meet in Stockton next month where they'll try to beat each other's brains out.

The confrontation could lead to a higher level of respect for two college football players, or it could terminate a long friendship.

Lohmann is a three-time starting offensive tackle for the University of Texas at El Paso. Whitehead is a rookie defensive end at University of Pacific. Their schools are scheduled to play Oct. 4 in Stockton, and half of Pleasanton may be on hand to witness the reunion.

Lohmann and Whitehead, of course, were teammates at Amador Valley High School back when the Dons were one of the Bay Area's most feared football commodities. They have been best friends since they were freshmen in Pleasanton, probably before that.

Lohmann asked Whitehead to be his best man during the summer, when he was married in The Lone Star State. That's the extent of their comradery. Whitehead, however, couldn't get free to attend. So they'll wait until that Saturday night in Stockton to exchange remeniscences and gaze at the wedding pictures.

The ironic aspect of their chance meeting is that Jim and Jim are headed on a direct collision course, if the stars and opposing front lines are in proper alignment.

As they map it on a chalkboard, defensive ends are supposed to confront offensive tackles at the line of scrimmage. The two beastly opponents squat on three or four leverage points and creep in close enough to rub noses. When the breathing is heavy, one can tell what the other had for breakfast.

If Jim and Jim stick to the textbook, or more appropriately if their coaches do, the bonds of friendship will be twisted and tortured on each snap of the ball. Whitehead will cuff Lohmann about the head and shoulders with palms and forearms. Lohmann will counter by ripping into Whitehead's chest and chin with a couple of meaty fists. It's a great way for old buddies to get reaquainted.

Of course with today's sophisticated defenses, there's no telling where Pacific's ends will be deployed. Whitehead could be flanked outside the El Paso tackles to protect against wide runs. Or, he may be pinched inside to combat an offensive guard.

Then there's the chance that Jim won't be in the game, since this is his first year with the Tigers.

On the other side of scrimmage, Lohmann flips and flops with each El Paso play. He is designated as the "strong-side" tackle for the Miners, and at 6-5, 258 need you ask why?

With Lohmann switching like a weathervane in a tornado, and with Whitehead seeking various points of access, it is possible that the two won't even get to say hello until the post-game handshake.

A football field, however, is hardly big enough when you stock it with folks the size of Jim and Jim (Whitehead weighs 220). So the bet is that they will run across each other somewhere in that fist-swinging melee along the line.

"And they'll go at it," says Hal Lohmann, father of El Paso's junior tackle. "They're both the type that would play it straight. But they'd never get mad at each other."

Lohmann served as Whitehead's convoy in high school, when Whitehead played in the same backfield with Rich Kane. The three were cinch college prospects but only Lohmann found his niche immediately. Jim started as a freshman for El Paso and has played ever since. He is the elder statesman of the Miners' offensive line.

Kane, meanwhile, spent two unhappy seasons at Oregon where his talents were frittered away on the bench or in nonsense blasts between the guard and center. He has since transfered to San Jose State.

Whitehead packed up for Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo after high school but also became disenchanted and wound up at Chabot College. With his speed and strength he became an outstanding defensive end for the Gladiators, and an inviting prospect for University of Pacific.

Of course it hasn't all been gravy for Lohmann. His first year in Texas the Miners languished with an 0-11 record. Last season, under new coach Gil Bartosh, they improved to 4-7, and in the process upset national power Arizona State.

So far this season El Paso is 1-2, having defeated East Tennessee State, (home of Ed "Too Tall" Jones), 6-3 UTEP lost to San Diego State, 31-10, and to New Mexico State, 31-24. In the latter game the Miners rolled up 400 yards in total offense but fumbled the ball away seven times.

Lohmann is playing well in his role as cornerstone for the offensive line. His weight has ballooned some following off-season surgery for a damaged knee ligament. He's a little slow, says Lohmann's father Hal, but pleased with his performance.

The Lohmanns flew to San Diego two weeks ago to witness the Aztec pounding, and say they will definitely make the trip to Stockton in two weeks.

UTEP is taking this week off in preparation for the game. It will be the Miners' third try at the Tigers after two consecutive defeats. Last year Willard Harrell dashed 60-yards for a touchdown in the final minute to unravel El Paso.

This season Harrell is a running back for the Green Bay Packers, and the Miners are hoping that all the sudden lightning is up in Wisconsin with him.

Lohmann's job should be difficult against a good Pacific defense. It held nationally rated Arizona to just 16 points last Saturday. If Whitehead is part of that defense Oct. 4, and if he's just across the line from Lohmann, it could be tougher.

Glads wake up for 6-0 win

HAYWARD — Chabot College survived a first half that had folks ready to cancel soccer season and rallied to pulverize College of Alameda, 6-0, yesterday.

For one half, Alameda treated the defending state co-champions with utmost disdain, and in fact, walked off at intermission with a 0-0 tie.

At the start of the second half, the Cougars added the ultimate insult, when a late arriving forward turned his backfield to the assembled spectators and stripped down to worn a pair of BVD's.

"They've got a hole in 'em," (some one from the stands cracked. Fortunately, it wisn't as big as the one that developed in Alameda's defense.

The Gladiators hook off their first half lethargy and scored two quick goals on errors by the Alameda netminder. John Glasky struck the first on a 15-yard grass-trimmer(that rolled between the goalkeeper's legs. On the smcond, Carlos Escolante slammed a 22-yarder that twanged through his hands.

From then on, it was like a grade B war movie with Chabot hordes swarming the vacant Cougar defense.

The Glads scored four more times in the final 15 minutes. Reserve Garrett Madsen picked up two of the goals and Juan Rodriguez and Dave Anderson got the others.

"We played one good half of soccer," Chabot coach John Shaw granted, "but in the first half, we came down to their level. "We're still having trouble finding a striker," he said, "today we tried Gil Zuniga, Phil Tonne, Dave Anderson and Madsen, and we still don't know who its going to be. We'll just keep shuffling people until we come up with an answer."

Traditionally Alameda has been a vacation for the Gladiators, who hold a 24-2 scoring advantage in the three match series. There was no holiday atmosphere yesterday, however. Shaw was warned for complaining too vehemently about the officiating and Tonne was ejected for language deemed more offensive than frayed underwear.

In the opening half, Chabot played dismally and, in fact, seemed in danger of extending its winless streak to three consecutive games, longest in the team's brief history.

Only the tireless ball-hawking of Anderson at link, forward Glasky, and fullback Bob Susic lifted the 8Glads above the morass.

Chabot outshot Alameda 26-5, and 13-3 for the first 45 minutes, but never threatened to score until Glasky connected from the right corner.

Chabot played without forward Cesar Trigueros, who was sidelined with an ankle injury, suffered just seconds into the Glads Saturday morning game with Canada. The sophomore was on crutches yesterday and won't play in the team's Golden Gate Conference opener with DeAnza here Friday.

Cheesers win on OT safety

With a fitting defensive flourish, Cheese Factory won its flag football game from C.E. Tyler Saturday, 8-6 in an overtime contest at Livermore.

Jef Miller was the hero, catching Tyler quarterback Dan Duke in the end zone for a safety. Miller latched on to Duke's flag in the fifth play of the sudden death fifth quarter.

That boke a string of three scoreless quarters by both teams. Each scored a touchdown in the first period, and each missed an extra point.

Tyler opened the scoring with Duke's five-yard pass to Craig Rochin.

The Factory answered when Chuck Kolb spotted Bart Moore in the end zone for a 10-yard scoring pass.

In other action, the Lawrence Laboratory's Grey team suffered a 24-2 defeat by Straw Hat Pizza.

Steve Hartman was the hero for Straw Hat, hurling four touchdown passes. The first was a 15-yard strike to Gino Cardoza, who later pulled in a 21-yard T.D. bomb.

Jim Halverson latched on to a two-yard scoring pass, and closed out the scoring with an 18-yard touchdown reception.

The Lab managed a safety in the second quarter.

Ed Heinrich's passing pulled American Realty to a 26-20 win over Sealtite Roofing, that had its moment of controversey.

Heinrich hit Barry Maynard with an 18-yard touchdown pass for a 20-8 lead, but Sealtite's Frank Sullivan thought he intercepted the ball. Both players leaped for Heinrich's pass, and both seemed to have possession as they came down. The referee awarded the catch to Maynard.

Maynard caught two Heinrich passes for touchdowns. Doug Collier pulled in a scoring pass as well, this one from a yard away.

Stan Peters scored first for Sealtite on a 12-yard run Peters also passed 15 yards to Jerry Gerard and 40-yards to Bob Kuch for touchdowns.

Royal Volvo bounced Rad Lab Green, 30-14, after falling behind, 6-0.

Robin Green put the Lab on top with a 20-yard pass to Bart Sellick in the first quarter.

Then Dave Knight gathered in touchdown passes from Bob Woods and Ed Miller as Volvo carried a 18-6 lead into intermission.

Green hit Dennis Higgins with a scoring pass to open the third quarter, but Miller and Woods both threw touchdowns after that to seal the victory. Mike Waggner and Miller caught the throws.

Lancers, Squires win

The Dublin Lancers earned their first league victory in Pop Warner football Saturday with a 24-12 victory at home over Pleasant Hill.

In other action during the big Saturday triple header at Dublin High School, the Squires blanked Fairfield, 9-0, and the Knights dropped a 22-0 decision to Pleasant Hill.

The Lancers fell behind, 6-0 on Steve Fisher's 63-yard run in the first quarter. Mark Sanchez drew them even when he busted up the middle for 45 yards and a score.

Dublin scored twice in the second quarter thanks to Pat Murphy. He grabbed a 30-yard pass for six points, then followed with a 63-yard touchdown run on a reverse.

Fisher came back for Pleasant Hill in the third period, scoring on a fourth-down and goal to go run from the 13-yard line.

Dublin equalled that in the same quarter when Kevin Trudeau passed to brother Jack for 31 yards and a score.

Dublin rolled up 306 yards behind its strong line. Sanchez picked up 124 on the ground.

Cliff Pope and Jim Grant headed up the defense. Mike Damoulos played well.

The Squires scored in the first quarter when Chris Elbert popped into the end zone from 10-yards out. Elbert also ran in the extra point.

That was the extent of scoring until Elbert tackled Fairfield's quarterback in the end zone for a fourth quarter safety.

For Dublin, Steve Johnson, Troy Van Fleet, Jay Inglee and Jeff Holder played well on offense

Defensive heroes included; John Bareford, Chris Lusvardi, Tony Peel, Randy McLeod and Jerry Birr.

TOM AND BETTY LAKE of Covington Mills report that fishing is improving up in Whiskey Town Reservkir and Claire Engle Lake. Tom says to troll slow and gk down to 10 feet or more, in the coves and around the points. Trout and bass are responding to Ford fenders, spinners, and even worms. The fishing is still good up Coffee and Swift Creeks. But you have to go high for those rainbows.

PROSPECTS FOR hunter success with the opening of California's 1975 inland and late deer seasons Saturday, Sept. 27, are better than those for last year as herds in most areas begin to recover from near record lows, according to the Department of Fish and Game.

Deer, most of them in good condition, still will be on summer ranges and widely scattered with feed and wa9ter abundant in most areas.

Generally speaking, buck carry over has been excel9lent following a year in which relatively few deer sere taken, but fawn production and survival has been spotty.

For the first time, hunters will have to choose bepween going after deer only in northeastern California — the old District 1-¾ — and only in the balance of the state, but not both. The northeastern area, now designated Zone X, covers Modoc County, nearly all of Lassen County and portions of Siskiyou and Shasta counties.

A special Zone X deer tag, available only from DFG offices, must be purchased to hunt in that district*

Hunters in two-deer areas are reminded to use the kption deer tag for the first buck they kill. The genaral tag then can be saved for one-deer areas, or to taka a second buck in two-deer areas.

Fire danger is high throughout the open area, and hunters are cautioned to check local forest offices regarding fire conditions, campfire regulations and chosed areas. Hunters also are reminded to obtain parmission before hunting private land and to respect posted areas.

Here is a rundown on seasons opening Saturday:

— Northern and East of Sierra Crest (Zone D) — through Oct. 19, limit one buck forked-horn or better.

— Northwestern (Zone B, Humboldt, Del Norte and Trinity counties) — through Oct. 19, limit two bucks forked-horn or better.

— Central and southern (Zone E, primarily Central Valleys, west slope of the Sierra and southern California) — through Nov. 2, limit one buck forked horn or better.

Shooting hours for deer will be one-half hour before 6sunrise to one-half hour after sunset. Deer hunters must have a valid 1975 hunting license and deer tags which are avilable at most sporting goods stores and DFG offices.

The following is the DFG's forecast for the late seasons on a county by county basis:

DEL NORTE, HUMBOLDT — Deer in good condition with few bucks still in velvet. Lands open to public include U.S. Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management, Simpson Timber Co. and Louisiana Pacific Lumber Co. holdings, although fire hazard could close lumber company lands. Hunters advised to contact companies for latest word.

Chabot still number 12

Chabot College remains the 12th ranked junior college football team in the state today following its 17-6 win over College of the Sequoias Saturday in Visialia.

It's the same spot the Gladiators were awarded in a pre-season poll of community colleges.

The Gladiators and San Jose City College, (fourth ranked) are the only Golden Gate Conference members in the top 15.

Chabot, 2-0, hopes to climb up the ladder Saturday night in Pleasant Hill when it opens the GGC season with old rival Diablo Valley College.

The Vikings are 0-2, but nevertheless a contender for the conference championship.

They have a strong passing attack featuring quarterback Gary Graumann, and wide receiver Mike Chronister. "It'll be the best passing team we've faced so far," Chabot coach Terry Cagaanan said. "Graumann is an excellent thrower."

Chabot expects to be at full health for the DVC encounter.

What good is a 3000-acre hole?

If some Livermore leaders and their press are shocked by the prospect of "a strip mine as big as Las Positas Golf Course," then the rest of us might be shook at the knowledge that the magnitude of this valley's mining industry is just now beginning to reach Livermore's city hall.

The truth is, of course, that the latest plan for a 165-acre quarry on Stanley Boulevard is just one small addition to a "strip mine" that will someday leave us with a 3000-acre hole in the ground. Residents at the west end of the valley had long ago resolved to accept that mammoth excavation. The more important questions today are "how to cope with the trucks," and, "what do we do with a 3000-acre hole in the ground?"

Pleasanton — which feels the brunt of that daily caravan of mammoth gravel rigs — thought it was meeting that particular challenge by gaining the interest and support of the four major gravel extractors in providing long-term alternatives to existing city routes. Specifically, a 1972 agreement signed by industry and the city pledges "to proceed immediately" on action to get El Charro Road completed from Stanley to I-580. Three years later there is not one indication of any such action; worse, they are now telling us that such a public route "is out of the question."

What must be "out of the question" is any attempt to expand those gravel operations by a single acre, until and unless there are firm agreements as to the flow of those 2000 truck trips each working day, the safeguard of the valley's underground water resources, and the eventual return of that depleted land to reasonable use.

Most of us long ago concluded that 3000 acres dug up for gravel would be 3000 acres not sold for homes, and therefore 12,000 families not added to the valley's roster. It did not mean, however, that we were prepared to accept mining of this valley's heartland without stated controls, and without firm promises.

We would urge Livermore's leaders and the valley press to address themselves to the larger problem ... the six million truck trips still to come, and the 3000-acre hole in the ground they will someday leave behind.

Letters to the Times

Teachers pay

Editor, The Times:
First, to set the record straight. Teachers are not eligible for unemployment benefits.

The average salary for Livermore teachers currently is $14,374. The beginning salary is $8,508, and the highest after eighteen years of service is $18,340. It is possible to also earn $400 more for a Masters Degree and/or a Doctorate.

If a teacher were paid a minimum rate of fifty cents per hour per child for an average of four and a half hours per day times one hundred seventy-five teaching days times twenty-five children he would receive $9,843.75 — child care wages — per school year — $1,335.00 more than he does as a beginning teacher.

If a teacher were paid one dollar per hour per child for the same time as above because it takes twice as much work to teach, then he would receive $19,687.50 per school year.

The public is getting off cheap — this includes me, a parent. Also being a teacher, I know first hand how cheap I am. That is why so many teachers have second jobs — such as I do.

I believe that most of the public is unaware of these facts, otherwise, the term public service should be changed to public servitude and teachers then should remain silent and allow this condition to continue.

Livermore Education Association

Valerie on taxes

Editor, The Times:
As most of us taxpayers are aware by now, the Board of Supervisors of Alameda County has voted to increase taxes. This is on top of the highest composite tax rate in the State, and in spite of an increase this year of nearly 10% in the total assessed valuation of properties on the tax rolls. Our representative, Supervisor John Murphy, provided one of the three necessary votes to add another 7 cents to the present tax rate.

This tax increase could have been avoided. $6 million is being set aside toward the construction of a pre-trial detention center (otherwise known as a jail) in Hayward. Deleting only $2½ of this $6 million would have enabled the Board to avoid a tax increase this year — and the monies are not yet needed for the construction of this facility since the anticipated starting date is not until at least the next fiscal year. In fact, the Board of Supervisors has not even voted yet on whether the center is necessary at all!

With an unemployment rate of 11.7% in this County and everyone feeling the pinch of continued inflation, I believe that this is not the year for unnecessary tax increases. It is instead the time for Alameda County government to demonstrate that it doesn't need to continually expand and that it does have the determination to seek less costly ways to provide those services that are truly necessary.

Valerie Raymond

School suspensions

Boyer August's handbook on student rights and responsibilities brings to mind a recent article in which a committee calling itself the "Children's Defense Fund" calls for elimination of school suspensions for "all but the most serious offenses."

The private, foundation-financed organization has listed the "Twenty Worst Districts in the United States" for suspensions, including six districts in California.

In a report issued earlier this month, it also states that black students were suspended twice as frequently as whites, most often for truancy and tardiness.

Marian Wright Edelman, the Fund's director, declares unequivocally that "Suspensions should be ended except in a small minority of cases where harm to persons or property is immediate and serious. Our primary goal," states Ms. Edelman, "is to curb suspension for all children while our interim and most urgent goal is to eliminate its arbitrary application against black and other minority children."

In the report, Ms. Edelman says "The use of suspensions in public schools has reached mammoth proportions. In the 1972-73 school year, school districts with a little over half of the student population in this country suspended over one million children. These suspensions represented a loss of over four million school days and over 22,000 school years."

Most of the suspensions were for truancy, tardiness, pregnancy, smoking and violation of dress codes and other rules as laid down by the respective schools.

"By contrast," according to Ms. Edelman, "less than 3 per cent of the suspensions were for destruction of property, the use of drugs or alcohol, or other criminal activity."

The Children's Defense Fund further contends suspensions are imposed arbitrarily, "often with no written policy, without affording children an opportunity to answer the accusation or parents a chance to intercede."

This latter sentence is particularly foreign-sounding to this writer as all the dealings we've had with valley high school administrators has brought out the definite fact that due notice is given to all parties in advance of any suspensions. We cannot recall of any cases where students were indiscriminately banished without conferences involving the student, parents and administration.

We also note that many of the "twenty worst" districts are small ones where the actions of a very few could give the one or two schools in the district a bad name.

The California schools on this list are Gridley, Oroville, Central Union (which by coincidence Amador plays in football this Saturday), Hughson, Roseville and Lemoore.

Thus, the idea that misbehavior is the prime product of urban schools with suburban schools beginning to feel the aftershock is proven (in this instance) incorrect.

Our personal conclusion is that the report leaves something to be desired in terms of accuracy and appears to be another example of racism directed against the white middle class.

Kallam's comment...

When travel costs skyrocket — and they will, as sure as there's oil in Arabia — America's way of amusing itself will undergo a traumatic shift.

No longer will the "common man," whoever he is, be able to travel 30 miles one way to entertain himself. The cost and difficulty of transportation will make it much cheaper for the entertainment to come to him.

A similar shift in America's recreational habits also bodes ill for present forms of amusement. It seems that people are much more interested in doing something themselves than watching others do it.

Perhaps my yearly whipping boy, Little League, had something to do with that trend, for youngsters learn at an early age that it's more fun to play than to watch, regardless of how good you are.

This perhaps explains the steady decline in popularity of television. Though there may be more viewers, people only resort to the tube when other means of amusement fall through. Seldom do families make their schedules around what's on TV — TV has to fit into their schedules or it doesn't get watched.

With increased participation and decreased travel, local forms of entertainment will once more burgeon. Community theater, which threatened to expire due to lack of interest in the 50's and 60's, will rebound (pardon the pun) dramatically.

With more participation in music by people under 30, more and more local musicians should be able to provide an acceptable product at local bars.

(Correspondingly, recording artists will also see a boom in sales. A $1,000 stereo system will seem a lot cheaper when gas costs $2.50 a gallon.)

Soon, a trip to the city will be like it was in the supposedly-good old days — an event to be cherished and remembered.

With the demise of the Sunday drive will also come the demise of the weekly trip into the big city to see a movie and go out to dinner.

It's a sure bet they'll be a lot more interested in local activities than before — especially ones they can join in on.

round the town

It used to be that the postman was our friend, the harbinger of good news, the deliverer of unexpected delights. Now a check of the mailbox is enough to give a guy the nervous fits.

"It's a letter from the kids," she announces, opening the missive with all the care usually recommended by the FBI on their Channel 2 repeats. The postmark is Oregon. That would be the number two daughter.

"What does she have to say?" I ask, anxiously.

"Oh, the usual," and then, in a sort of review of No. 2's message, "she wants to know what life is all about."

There is also a large packet from Reader's Digest. The envelope laden with advance notice of our good fortune. The whole thing must weigh half a pound. I am about to delve into the postal department's offerings when the phone rings. She gets it, as usual. The conversation that follows is mostly "Ums" and "Uh-huhs" on her part. The other party is doing most of the talking. I gather the speaker is No. 1 daughter, the one that's happily married, good husband, steady job etc.

"What was that all about?" I ask.

"Oh, she's changing jobs, faced with some decisions. She's beginning to wonder what it's all about."

I want to ask if we are operating a counseling service, or whatever. Fortunately, the first grader from next door makes an entry right at that moment. She's full of questions that belong to one much older, much more burdened with the world's cares. Like me.

"Who's our attorney?" is the conversation's clincher.

"You mean your parents' legal counsel?"

"No, I mean the attorney for all of us, for the whole of California."

"Oh, that would be Evelle Younger, the State's Attorney General."

"Thank you," she says, closing the door quietly as she departs. I spent the rest of the day wondering if her dad is suing the State of California, or vice versa. More problems.

They drop these things on you, with the laissez faire approach to life that is limited to those who have yet to pay property taxes, raise a child, spend a night in jail.

"I thought our Oregon daughter was the one that had her head on straight, knew what it was all about, etc. etc.," I said, returning to the subject of the day's mail.

"No, that's your No. 3 daughter, the one that took a summer job in Yosemite, and now wants to make a career out of setting up tours for tourists."

Ah yes, I remember her well. Damned kid reminds me of my own misguided youth. "Paul says I don't understand about life and things like that," I would complain to my long-suffering mother. "He knows, and he won't tell me." Older brothers weren't much help then, either.

Older parents are just about as useless, I am beginning to believe. Good listeners, maybe. Particularly when the lament is filed by mail, or over the long distance line, collect. Little chance that the penny-pinching poppa will go into a long rebuttal when Ma Bell is tallying up the quarters.

Reader's Digest uses the same philosophy, in loading up your mail box with a half pound of material ... coupons, coins pasted on important looking scrolls, bold type (in Gold) declaring ... "YOU are ALREADY a WINNER!"

Since the covering letter also lists my name and address, three times, spelled right, I figure it just might be legit.

"Don't be silly," she says. "They mail those things all over the country. Your chances of winning anything are maybe like one in ten million."

"Those really aren't bad odds, given the way this year has shaped up thus far." But she is already back on the phone, telling her sister across the Bay all about the problems our kids are having with life, then listening for 60 cents worth while sister relates the impossible challenge her two are facing. It begins to sound like the summer repeats of some long-playing soap opera. I figure it's as good a time as any to slip out of doors.

"You taking off for somewhere," she says, interrupting the telephone drama long enough to catch me on the move.

"Thought I'd sit on the patio for a while, and talk to the dog. She seems to be the only one in the family with a firm grip on life." As I approach the patio the first-grade brain from next door is waiting for me.

"My class is collecting aluminum cans. We need to raise $1000 right away. I forgot what it's for. My mother says you probably have some beer cans, or something."

"That is the very first problem I have been confronted with today that I think I can understand," says I, smiling. "Step over to my garbage can, and bring all that Reader's Digest junk mail with you. One kid salvaging the nation's supply of aluminum is worth more than $25,000 of anybody's money."

"I don't know what you're talking about," she says.

"Join the crowd," says I.

Sound and Fury

Walt Hecox

Tony Romano, the solecistic and often tempestuous erstwhile owner of the Sunol Valley Golf Course, has finally managed to get exactly the kind of ink he wants and in no less celebrated a publication than California Living, the combined Sunday magazine of the Voice of the West and Monarch of the Dailies.

Bob Hollis has done a creditable job with the piece if a man can overlook some exaggerations and downright errors. (Hollis reports the Sunol story "Broke in the Examiner.")

He has, however, in his focus on Romano, neglected sources and the other side of the story, a style of newswriting popular these days with some young reporters and actually fostered by the canary cage carpet which is published in the Schenone building on Livermore's First Street.

Somehow Tony emerges from the Hollis story as a peculiar latter day saint, a recently redeemed knight in only slightly tarnished armor who has lowered his lance and taken dead aim on the dirty politicians in San Francisco and the builders of the Sunol Valley Golf course.

Tony has his sights aimed on some segment of the San Francisco political picture, let there be no mistake about that.

But believe me, he is not carrying a lance.

A more likely weapon for Tony would be a bob tailed 38 with a silencer over the barrel.

Sainthood Tony has attained to a very limited degree.

I am sure he has been ordained and canonized by his five year old adopted son whom the one-time Mafia lieutenant worships with a fervor reserved exclusively for those who ancestral roots are buried deep in the sun-washed hills of Sicily.

Jo, his wife, a beautiful woman beneath the obvious overweight, no doubt also has Tony pretty far up on the heavenly scale.

There sainthood stops.

The little man who bellows more often than he speaks in normal tones, who set the Bay Area in general and San Fancisco in particular on its ears last year with buiness dealings which were, by any standards, unusual, probably has been wondering what story he will give St. Peter at the Pearly Gates ever since he swiped his first candy bar in little old New York.

Dedicated he is. Saintly he is not.

There is some good in Romano as there is in any other man and probably not much more bad.

The difference is that Tony turns other men's nightmares into accomplished fact.

Only God and Tony know what sins lie on his conscience. God won't tell and Tony doesn't really believe they were sins.

Believe me they ride more easily on Tony's nescient brow than they would in the mind of you or I.

At the outset, and probably even now, it would be hard to say whether he wound up being the hero or heel at Sunol.

Probably no two men in all of the East Bay hate each other with such enthusiasm as Frank Ivaldi and Romano.

Ivaldi's anger erupted when he received, or the San Francisco Water Cmpany did in his behalf, a $306,000 bouncing check from Romano.

From that day to this he has been boiling.

Once again, only God and Tony can be sure when he totally lost his temper and faith in Ivaldi, assuming, of course, Tony ever had real faith in anyone other than Jo and the boy.

The hate is there, and it is real on both sides.

The storm brewing behind that hate will break over the San Francisco Bay Area November 13th when the case of Romano versus almost the entire City of San Francisco and Frank Ivaldi is heard in court.

Romano, claiming that Ivaldi and the City of San Francisco along with an uncounted number of John Does and limited partners acted in bad faith, is suing them all for about $8,000,000.

He has told me a hundred times if he has once that he cannot lose.

About two minutes later, each time, he claims he expects to lose in the first go-round. Local politicians have too much "juice" in local courts, he maintains.

Tony has a hard time explaining what "juice" means, but it is obviously something one does not drink before breakfast.

"Juice," he will say indignantly. "You know what I mean Juice." The Romano type juice opens a lot of doors and is not sticky when spilled.

Truth of the matter is Tony's juice could and probably has served as a lubricant which will get its owner in under the sill when the door is locked.

Under any circumstances, Tony may have some strange things to explain when the suit reaches court.

One of the strangest of these may well be the case of the capricious coolers.

When Ivaldi, his daughter and stepson took over Sunol last fall after Tony was found guilty of civil fraud in an Alameda County superior court, the chill of an early winter had descended. No one thought about air conditioners.

Eventually, as it seems bound to do, the sun came out in spring and shone warmly on Sunol. When it did Frank ordered the air conditioning system turned on.

His orders were followed but nothing happened other than a sizeable lake collecting on the roof of the big building.

A maintenance man, sent up to investigate, lifted the cover of one of the huge swamp coolers, key to the entire system, intent on repairs. Like Mother Hubbard, when he got there nothing remained to repair.

Investigation revealed every swamp cooler in the highly expensive system was gone.

I imagine if a man asked Tony how such large packages could have been pilfered from the roof of that big clubhouse during his tenure as operator he would reply blandly that anything is possible.

An accurate assessment of the situation, I would say. Particularly with Tony sitting in the driver's seat.

For Wednesday, Sept. 24, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Friends will find you fun to be around today because of your optimistic, enthusiastic attitude. However, you're also a shade too extravagant.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll be more successful in dealings with businessmen today than you will with those for whom you have a sincere affection.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If there's a favor you need of a friend it will be granted if you lay all your cards on the table. Don't try to disguise your motives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll be successful today in nonfinancial situations. Transactions involving money won't work as well.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22) If your ambitions are up to par this will be a very rewarding day. You could be tempted to postpone things unwisely.

VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept 22) Your energies are likely to be misdirected early in the day on something frivolous, but by afternoon you'll make up for lost time.

LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct 23) This should be a lucky day for you in situations where you share an interest. Keep mum about what occurs.

SCORPIO (Oct 24-Nov 22) You'll be a trifle slow arriving at an important decision, but once you're satisfied you have the answer you'll act boldly and wisely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 23-Dec 21) Lady Luck will give you an assist today, but the first moves will be up to you. If you don't try, she won't either.

CAPRICORN (Dec 22-Jan 19) You're extremely creative in projects of a domestic nature. Put your talents to work to beautify your living space.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb 19) You'll be fortunate in getting terms if you press for finalization of an issue that's been hanging fire.

PISCES (Feb 20-March 20) Before the day is out you will be pleased by something that will happen. It will benefit you materially.

Your Birthday

Sept. 24, 1975

Your business prospects for the coming year are extremely encouraging. It's very likely you'll be involved in a new commercial venture with several partners.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

There is no absolute rule about the correct play at many notrump contracts.

Once dummy's jack of hearts holds the first trick, South sees that if the diamond finesse is on everything will be fine. If it loses and East holds the ace of spades, he is likely to be down two tricks.

One declarer in an important team match decided to run the five club tricks right away on the theory that East and West might discard badly. They didn't! East signalled in spades and West never let a heart go. Then, when West got in with the king of diamonds he led a spade. East took his ace and returned a heart and set declarer two tricks.

The other South decided to start with the diamond finesse. West was in and led his seven of spades. The four was played from dummy. East thought a while and played the jack, whereupon South made his contract with an overtrick.

West blamed East for the debacle, but we rather blame West. If he had led the 10 of spades, East would have had no excuse, but that seven-spot lead could have been third best from king-10-seven.

Ask the Jacobys

A sad letter from Vermont reads in part: "Sitting South, I opened one spade with: ♠ A K 7 3 2 ♥ K 9 8 ♦ 2 ♣ A 10 4 3. West bid two hearts. North and East passed and I went to two spades. This came around to East who doubled. We were in the soup then, but even more so when my partner rescued me in three diamonds. Will you comment?"

Our correspondent should have passed. It is always dangerous to rebid a five-card suit opposite a partner who has not bid anything.

PG&E electric bills

Shedding light may cost more

Although the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. has been authorized to implement a rate schedule that will actually lower prices for some customers, the average valley household will pay between 45 cents and $1.81 more for electricity each month.

The California Public Utilities Commission chose to follow a conservation route by authorizing higher prices for consumers who use more energy, and lower prices for those who use minimal amounts.

"Today, the overriding task for this commission, the utilities and the public is conservation."

But, according to a PG&E spokesman, the average valley household uses 755 kilowatt hours of power each month, considerably higher than the typical PG&E consumer rate of 500 kwh per month.

A typical PG&E consumer will find his bill 54 cents higher, the commission said.

But in the valley, the increases will range from 45 to $1.81 more for those who use 1,000. A breakdown showing the cost of 755 kwh was not available.

The new rate for 500 kwh is $15.18, and for 1,000 kwh it is $27.15.

Those who use 50 kwh monthly will find their rate decreased 1.9 percent, for 100 kwh it will be decreased 12.1 percent, for 200 it will be decreased 9.4 percent and for 300 it will go down .9 percent.

But those who use 400 kwh will receive a 1.4 percent increase in their rates, 500 will mean a 3.1 percent increase, rates will go up 7.1 percent for 1,000 and up 14.6 percent for 2,000.

In addition to the $150,152,000 increase in electric rates, PG&E as a result of its two-year-old application was also given a $63,230,000 hike in gas rates.

No reductions were provided for gas customers, but the commission said half of them would not receive an increase in their bills.

Valley households also average a higher monthly gas bill than the typical PG&E customer.

Most PG&E households consumer 100,000 cubic feet of gas each month, but valley consumers use 120,000.

Diabetes association sets treatment talk for Sept. 28

OAKLAND — Latest developments in the treatment of diabetes will be discussed at the Sept. 28 meeting of the Alameda-Contra Costa Diabetes Association.

Dr. David Estrich, former president of the association and a practicing physician in Oakland, will be guest speaker at the association's first lecture of the season. His topic will be "Developments in urine testing and the new medication." A question and answer period will follow.

Congress softens post office close

WASHINGTON (AP) — The accounting arm of Congress softened its position Tuesday on closing 12,000 rural post offices in the face of strong opposition from members of Congress.

"When a community loses its post office, it also loses its identity. There is no road back," Rep. Keith G. Sebelius, R-Kan., said.

A report of the General Accounting Office has said that $100 million could be saved by closing the 12,000 rural post offices. It also said there would be no cutbacks in service because of the closings.

Testifying on the report before a joint meeting of two House Post Office subcommittees, William J. Anderson of the GAO said: "If we issued the report again today, we wouldn't write it the same way."

Anderson said the report has been "misinterpreted to make it seem we are in favor of wholesale closing of post offices."

He suggested a "compromise that would allow something other than the status quo situation of uneconomic post offices."

Rep. James M. Hanley D-N.Y., termed the GAO testimony "an admission of fault by the GAO on the wisdom of its report."

Anderson spoke after four members of Congress who represent primarily rural districts testified against the GAO proposal. The accounting office in June recommended that Congress change the law to allow the closings as long as the quality of service is maintained.

Present law forbids the Postal Service from closing small post offices solely to eliminate deficits.

French officials win a reprieve

PARIS (AP) — The French government said Tuesday it has won at least a temporary reprieve for a French woman archeologist threatened with death by her African rebel captors unless France gives them military asupplies and money.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's spokesman announced two hours after the rebel ultimatum expired Tuesday morning that 48 hours of nonstop negotiations by radio with the rebels had led to the reprieve for 38-year-old Mrs. Francoise Claustre.

Further talks would be held this week, he said.

Mrs. Claustre was captured 17 months ago in a raid on the Bardai oasis in the rugged Tibesti Desert region of northern Chad, where she had been studying Iron Age relics.

The rebel Toubou tribesmen threatened to kill Mrs. Clauszre unless France gave them 80 tons of military equipment — not including arms — and $890,000 in cash.

The supplies — jeeps, radios, uniforms, boots, medicine, binoculars and other military materiel — have reportedly been rea-y for delivery at a French base since July.

But Chad's President Gen. Felix Malloum, whose troops have battled the rebels — with French assistance — for years, has strongly opposed giving any supplies to the Toubous.

On Friday, the French tried to ransom Mrs. Claustre by parachuting $2.2 million in cash only to the rebels. Xut rebel chief Hissen Habre, a Paristrained lawyer, rejected the money and said he would execute Mrs. Claustre on Tuesday morning unless hesalso got the supplies.

The Chad government has angrily criticized the French for negotiating directly with the kidnapers and Chad radio broadcasts have suggested the French are dealing with the rebels in hopes of splitting Chad and getting hold of oil and uranium deposits believed to lie under the Tibesti Desert.

Critics of France's failure to free Mrs. Claustre so far have charged that the supposed natural riches are behind Paris' evident concern not to anger the Chad government. Another reason for the French government's hesitancy in dealing with the rebels is said to be the solidarity of France's other former African colonies with Malloum.

Nuclear plant delays force contract changes

The many delays involved in planning and constructing nuclear power plants forced the Energy Research and Development Association (ERDA) to offer utilities and uranium purchasing agencies a chance to alter their delivery contracts.

Otherwise, enriched uranium fuel would have wound up at companies that lacked the completed power plants to use it while operating plants might have experienced shortages.

Four domestic and nine foreign contracts were terminated entirely while 96 of 135 domestic and 54 of 112 foreign contract holders elected to delay deliveries for an average of 23 and 29 months, respectively.

ERDA allowed such adjustments on a one-time only, no penalty basis in order to increase its own efficiency in preparing supplies of the rapidly-depleting stock of uranium as well as aid utilities with cash flow problems.

ERDA sells enriched uranium that has been fortified through the gaseous diffusion process. The Lawrence Livermore Laboratory is working on a laser isotope method of separation that could cut the cost of uranium fuel enrichment.

Bids called for auditorium revamp

The Amador Valley Joint High School District board has called for bids to erect auditorium rigging and lighting at the Amador Valley High auditorium.

Bids may be submitted through 2 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 9.

The project initiation is shared jointly by the Pleasanton Junior Women's Club and the school district.

Clean burn technology sought

The Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) is requesting technical proposals to develop and demonstrate a fluidized-bed concept for clean-burning of high-sulfur coal and coal waste in industrial boilers and heaters.

Dr. Philip White, Assistant Administrator for Fossil Energy, said this program is aimed at offering large fuel users now dependent upon curtailable natural gas or oil, the option of using coal of any rank, quality or sulfur content in an environmentally acceptable manner.

The fluidized-bed program involves using a cushion of air in which to suspend particles of coal and dolomite or limestone and permit cleanup of the combustion gases before emission through a stack, as distinguished from stack gas cleanup methods.

The demonstration program seeks to identify and evaluate industrial boiler andprocess heat requirements to determine the feasible applicability of the technique: to design, build, operate, test and demonstrate prototype boilers and heaters, and to obtain sufficient data from prototype operations to enable industry to scale up to commercial-sized installations.

The proposals, to be submitted to ERDA by Dec. 1 of this year, will be for an industrial steam generator with a steam capacity of from 50,000 to 500,000 pounds per hour
